Tracks4Testicles

Have you ever noticed how modern-day culture is obsessed with the male crown jewels? Especially rap music has quite a considerable affection towards balls, from rappers grabbing them constantly when performing to mentioning them literally all the time.

But we don't judge. Actually, we encourage it!
We just think it's a shame that all that attention to our good friends downstairs doesn't transfer to their health.

You see, testicular cancer is the most common form of cancer for men between 18-35. This age group is coincidentally also the primary audience of rap music.

So we partnered up with our good pals over at Spotify to create: Tracks4Testicles.

A service that automatically tracks every ball-related lyric and acts as the ultimate playlist for some rap-infused self-examination time. The playlist will remind you once a month that it's time to visit those hairy barries of yours.

And that's how ball-grabbing artists went from rappers to rescuers.
