

REPURPOSED REFLECTIONS

NOTEBOOKS MADE FROM PAPER WASTE

While the digitization has helped most industries decrease their paper waste tremendously, some still struggle. Like the creative industry. Test printing, dummy folding, color checking, and quick sketching is an inevitable part of a creative process, leading to piles of paper getting binned every day.

I collect paper waste from local print shops and art schools, and up-cycle it into notebooks filled with glimpses of random creative process. I cut, fold, glue, and sew the books by hand, and all materials down to the thread are recycled. It's a personal project for now, but imagine the impact on a large scale!

I GO THROUGH PAPER WASTE,
PICK THE BEST PAGES, CUT
AND FOLD THEM INTO
SECTIONS, SEW THEM TOGETHER,
AND DECORATE THE COVER
